We now learn that the European who died suddenly while en route to the Government Civil Hospital on the ard instant, as stated in our issue last night, and who was there refused admission, was named Harry Schultz, and that the liquor he fairly drank himself to death with was "square-face," purchased at a licensed Chinese liquor shop situated in Queen's Road West, just opposite Mr. Petersen's boardinghouse. We are further informed that the man Schultz was an inmate of Mr. Petersen's boardinghouse, and not a boarder at the German Tavern. It was Mr. Peterson who paid the funeral expenses as well as hospital charges which had accumulated a fortnight ago, when the unfortunate man was an inmate of the Civil Hospital by reason of an attack of the D. THE waifs and strays from the fair City of Rams who are just now flocking into the colony as a result of the "five-cent-and-cup-of-tea" fares prevailing on the opposition river liners, have turned their attention to the subject of the pros and cons of "raising the wind" by pilfering from Government forts, dock-yards, etc., etc. A light-fingered gent who was caught by Constable Short yesterday in the act of getting away with a bag of twine worth $3.50, the property of the Dock-yard authorities; was sent into retirement for a fortnight, by order of Mr. Wise, at the Police Court to-day.

THE Moukden correspondent of the Chinese Times writes, under date 4th October:-For the past fortnight harvest operations have been general over our province. Though not equal fair quality. Small millet of all varieties is its best, and beans, the great exporting article of this province, are an excellent crop as to both bulk and quality. Large millet, which provides the staple food for the people here gave promise of a magnificent crop -even equal to last year's. But it was attacked by a small insect which, like s plague, fastened upon every plant, and in all Southern Manchuria this crop, though bulky in straw, is of poor quality in grain. Partly on this account and partly from the demand from Tientsin, the price of this millet has advanced considerably. From the north comes news that hoarlrost descended so early that the millet was checked in filling up, and it is not therefore anticipated that the north will be able to counter-balance the insect-smitten southern For the past two months boats have been seized on the river and carts levied in town to send grain from the officials of Manchurla to the suffering around Tientsin. From Moukden 10,000 tan of about 340 cattles each, were sent away in hoats to Newchwang a month ago. A similar quantity has gone since or is going now. And a third 'myriad' tan is to be started off immediately. Other 30,000 ian have gone or are going from other riverine ports to be sent by steamer or gun-boat from Newchwang. duty of transmitting this grain laid, by the Governor-General, on a military General, a gentleman who deserves great credit for his generosity and activity in alleviating the distress caused by the recent famine here. The General has, of course, to hand on the various duties to subordinates till the lower ranks of soldiers find occupation, not uncongenial, in hunting up bidden carts and tracing out unwilling boat-owners. Some officers have to go down river with the boats, and one superior officer told me he had to go to Tientsin and even to Peking, before his connection with

With respect to Mr. Whitehead's complaint, he was sure that any recommendations the unofficial members made in Finance Committee would be duly recorded. They must understand, if they still wished for a Special Committee, that such committee's report would have to be agreed to by Council, or disagreed to. In regard to such matters as the military contribution—which was one in which unofficial members had not much freedom-if it was considered one which the Government had to support, the official members would bear in mind that they had no option but to support it, even although it might be in opposition to the opinions of the unofficial members, who might rest assured that their views would be forwarded to the Secretary of State. He hoped that the Estimates would be got through as quickly as was consistent with the care that was due to

The motion was then put, and agreed to. . THE LAW REVISION COMMISSION.

Mr. Whitehead, pursuant to notice, asked :-Will the Government lay on the table a full report of the proceedings of the Law Revision Commission appointed on 12th August, 1882,-"to prepare and report upon Drafts for a revised edition of the Ordinances, and for amendments of the same, incorporating the results of such recent Imperial legislation as appears applicable to the circumstances the Colony, and providing for improved procedure in the administration of Justice," and a statement showing the total cost of the Commission since the date of its appointment until the present time, how and in what way the money has been spent, the work accomplished and about the time when the edition of the Ordinances now being printed will be published also the cost of the edition being printed? The Acting Attorney-General replied, with respect to the first part of the question, that the Government had had no report on the Commission's work, beyond a letter from time to time transmitting the Ordinances as they were prepared. He might say, as one of the original members of the Commission, that when they started the work they had no idea that they had begun a task of such magnitude as afterwards turned out to be. The first difficulty, they found, was to ascertain what laws they had to revise. They only had a volume of them up to 1865, and that did not shew the Ordinances as they were passed, but as they had been amended by a former Commission. After some time, and no little trouble on the part of Mr. McKean, the Secretary, they got copies of the Ordinances from 1865 up to 1882 and had to go through them to see how they had been amended by subsequent legislation. That took a good deal of time, as all the members of the Commission were busy men; but when they had done that they had to begin to decide wha revision was necessary. At the end of 1887 when Acting Attorney-General, he (Mr. Ackroyd prepared a statement of the work done up to them, intending to send it to the Council, but the opportunity did not occur before Mr. O'Malley's arrival, and he had not had time since. But he might state that nearly all the Ordinances were revised, many being amended and others repealed A work of no small magnitude was that o finding what Ordinances had not been expressly repealed—to give an idea of the work he might mention Ordinance 4 of 1887, which expressly repealed a number of Ordinances that had ceased to be in force, or which had been impliedly repealed—the schedule contained no less than 104 Ordinances that had had to be considered. Another work which took a very long time was going through a number of Acts of Parliament to see which could be applied to this Colony, and those which actually applied of which it was intended to make a list for publication. The Commission existed from sometime in 1882 until early this year, when, as it was ascertained that an Attorney-General had been appointed without the right of private practice, but with a larger salary, the Commission considered that they could hardly be required to continue their gratuitous services. and so they closed the sittings. Whilst he (the speaker) was in England, he believed, it was decided to reprint all the Ordinances, which was now being done. The Acting Colonial Secretary said, with reference to the financial part of Mr. Whitehead's question, that up to the end of October the Commission had spent $9,982. In June last $3,000 were voted for the reprint of the Ordinances, the total cost being estimated at $6,000. Mr. Leach, who was supervising the work, expected it to be finished about March

The remainder of the proceedings will be published to-morrow.

If it abolishes monarchy in all its forms and acquires universal freedom and equality, the chances are that in some future era of senility and mental decay it will resurrect the ancient incubus and commence the weary struggle for liberty aftesh. If it shakes off the tyranny of Capital, and abolishes poverty and strife, there is no possible guarantee that all these venerable burdens will not be replaced upon its shoulders again by its own act, only to be removed by the long effort of centuries of miscry., Rienzi gave, to the Romans of the middle-ages the freest constitution which the world, up till then, had ever known, and the citizens of the new commonwealth butchered him to make way for the restoration of their ancient tyrants. France sacrificed one republic for the sake of Napoleon the Conqueror, and another for Napoleon the Imbecile-the man of Mexico and Sedan. She was cheerfully prepared to sacrifice a third for Boulanger-the smallest, meanest charlatan of his age, if that feathered warrior had afforded her the opportunity. Even progress grows wearisome at times, and liberty and prosperlty become monotonous. If Lucifer became tired of Paradise, it is not improbable that the world may become tired of the millennium, should that blessing ever come in its way. If any one desires to ask, under these circumstances, what the world is striving for, it can only be replied that it is striving for anything it can get, and getting it anyhow it can. It is striving for the emancipation of labour, for the destruction of all manner of old-established monopolies and abuses which have made the worker a slave and a pariah, for the abolition of war and monarchy and aristocracy and landlordism-in short, it is striving for the great millennium, with a perfect consciousness that it may never come, that it may not be up to treasured, as every school child knows and sample when it does arrive, and that in any case it is not likely to stay. It is only the things | Eve attempted to carry a 4-leaved shamrock of that are not worth having that are immortal, precious stone from Paradise with her, but it and the survival of the fittest is an exploded fell and shattered at her feet. Think of the superstition. The Athenian lasted only for a disaster thus entailed upon the human race. day and the Chinaman goes on for ever. phliosopher dies out, but of the pawnbroker there is no end. The Nibilist is hanged, and the Tsar keeps on living. If the Tsar were worth preserving he would probably be dead, and if the Chinaman were anything else than a menace and a curse he would be extinct. And if the millennium of human liberty be worth striving for it is not likely to last long when it comes, for nothing is indestructible on earth except corruption. But still it is better to have possessed liberty and lost it than never to have possessed it at all-it is better for the human race to be regenerated, with chaos to come after, than to be a Dead Sea of humanity without a hope or a future. The old proverb which the worn-out voluptuary of Jerusalem passed off on an ignorant world needs to be turned upside down; the dead lion is better than the live dog after all; or If it isn't, then it was only a second-hand flow when it was alive, and crawled into the realm of zoology by the back door.—Sydney Bulletin.

SUPERSTITIONS OF TO-DAY.

Men who swear there is neither God nor future will yet betray a strange weakness toward some pet superstition that they will openly laugh at, but secretly believe. We all have them-not only ignorant people, but the best of us. Few people would have the hardihood to sit down at a table with thirteen as the total number. Fow.

people will count the hacks in a funeral procession. Few girls will read the marriage service entirely through in the face of the awful and mysterious superstition that this indulgence destroys hope of marriage. We don't call the fortune-teller the priest of Apollo, the wart charmer a witch. There is a change of name

-the fact lingers. We are still superstitious. All the generations that have passed have accumulated and handed down to us a vast number of superstitions. Each country has furnished its share, and probably the most of them date from the time when the human race was still in its Asiatic cradie.

Birth, marriage and death are the three most important events in every life. Hence the kind of liberty instead of the sort that is offered | its nails before it is a year old. They should be to him. And so the world will progress towards bitten off, or the grand-dams will not answer for

A piece of the bride's cake must be broken over her head as soon as she is safely on the other side. It is very unlucky for her to be in a happy state yet, having been acquired in the only available on her wedding day. She must be as dolorous as possible, violent fits of weeping being especially

It is a good idea for the brides-maids to throw away as, many pins as possible on the wedding day, as this will hasten marriage. The bride should throw away her slipper in leaving the wedding feast, and she who catches it will be the first married. The wedding ring of the mother is an infallible cure for eruptions on the skin of the child. The ring must be rubbed three times around each sore. Cure is certain.

The virtue of the dew that glitters and sparkles in every leaf and flower of a May morning has been recognized from the earliest times. If a young girl wishes to obtain and preserve a glorious complexion she should venture out of a May morning and wash her face in the dew. It also has peculiar power in infant cases of Work for your living. Born on Sunday, You will never know want. To recall a person after they have left the house is bad luck. To go back for something forgotten is also bad luck, unless you sit down before going out again.

If, when you sit before the fire, a live coal jumps out, it is a sign that you are to have good luck, especially in money matters. To wash in water another has washed in is not only bad sanitarily, but also superstitiously. He who makes many crumbs at the table will never have any money to spare. It is flying in the face of fortune to sweep dust out of the front door or to allow it to be swept out. In so doing you are sweeping out your good luck. To count one's gains brings luck, but to find money is the worst possible luck. The 4-leaved clover, once found, should be believes. It brings luck of every description.

To see the moon over the left shoulder is as unlucky as to hold the four of clubs at cards. But the new moon seen over the right shoulder, or straight in front, portends fortune as smiling as her own bright rays.

One should be careful in writing a letter not to cross out a word in it. To do so means that any request you may have made in the letter will not be granted. It is very unlucky to dry a letter before the fire, instead of allowing it to dry slowly and naturally. But unlucklest of all is it to drop the letter on the floor after finishing it.
